P R E F A C E .

IN the first Session of the first Parliament of the Dominion, the Rules and Practice in force in the old Province of Canada with regard to Private Bills were adopted by Parliament, with some modifications in the details, which, though of importance in their place, effected no material alteration in the system. These are all embodied in the present Edition of this work; and as no clearly defined Private Bill system of practice has prevailed in the Local Legislatures of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, the precedents referred to are all taken from Canadian practice; they include those given in the last Edition, and others gleaned from subsequent legislation, both in the Provincial Parliament, and in the first Session of that of the Dominion.

In the course of the last mentioned Session, it happened upon several occasions, that doubts arose as to the true interpretation of those provisions of the "British North America Act" which placed certain classes of subjects under the exclusive control of the General Parliament, and of the Provincial Legislatures, respectively. A chapter has therefore been added, on "Legislative Jurisdiction," in which mention is made of the various questions that arose from time to time, and the course taken thereon; and certain observations and suggestions are offered, in the hope that some plan may be devised for obtaining a more definite interpretation of the Imperial Act in this respect.

The authorities cited in explanation of the Imperial practice, are :—

PREFACE TO THE FIRST EDITION.

THE object of this work, is to explain fully the proceedings at the various stages, in either House, and in Committee, upon Private Bills solicited in the Parliament of Canada. The system of practice, though based on that adopted in the Imperial Parliament, differs from it materially in many of the details; and the absence of any hand-book or guide to the course of proceedings to be observed, has been long felt, not only by parties soliciting or opposing Bills, but also by Members of the Legislature charged with the conduct of such Bills in either House.

The writer has been connected with the Private Bill Office since its establishment, and has thus had an opportunity of noting down, as they occurred, the various decisions and modifications which have been made from time to time, and which have established the system of practice as it now stands; while in all matters not specially provided for, reference is made (in accordance with a Standing Order) to the usages of the Imperial Parliament.

The Rules of the two Houses concerning Private Bills are appended to the work. The Provincial precedents referred to (based on decisions or practice, in the House or in Committee,) will be found in the Journals of the Legislative Assembly (the present system having been but recently introduced into the Upper House).

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY,

QUEBEC, May, 1862.

PREFACE TO THE SECOND EDITION.

THE first edition of this Treatise was published early in the Session of 1862, when the new Rules adopted by the Legislative Council assimilating the practice of the two Houses first came into operation. Certain modifications of the Rules and practice, calculated to define more clearly the requirements of the Rules, and the powers of the Committee on Standing Orders, and also to facilitate the transaction of business between the two Houses, were suggested in the course of the Session, and these having been agreed upon by the Private Bill Committee of each House, were embodied in Reports to the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly, respectively, and received their concurrence.

The alterations thus made, though comparatively unimportant, rendered it desirable that a new edition of this work should be issued; and the Committee of the Legislative Assembly having specially recommended that this should be done, a second edition has been prepared accordingly, embodying the changes above referred to, and also the precedents established by decisions and practice in the year 1862.

PROCEEDINGS TO BE ADOPTED IN CONDUCTING
PRIVATE BILLS
THROUGH THE PARLIAMENT OF CANADA.

1.—PRELIMINARY OBSERVATIONS.

The distinction between Public and Private Bills is one that has been recognized and acted upon by the Parliament of the Mother Country from a very early period, and the mode of proceeding upon the two classes of bills has also differed in some important particulars. In passing Private Bills, while Parliament still exercises its legislative functions, its proceedings also partake also of a judicial character; the parties interested in such bills appear as suitors, while those who apprehend injury are admitted as adverse parties to the suit.

Distinction between Public and Private
Bills.

Much of the formality of a Court of Justice is maintained; conditions are required to be observed and their observance proved by the promoters of a bill, and if they abandon it and no other parties take it up, the bill is dropped, however sensible the House may be of its value.*

First provision for Private Bills in Canada

Although this distinction was recognized by the Legislature of the old "Province of Canada" in framing Rules for its guidance at its first Session (in 1841) by the adoption of a provision requiring two months' notice of applications for private bills, and the exaction of a fee of £20 on all such bills; and also by the appointment, every Session, of a Standing Committee on Private Bills; little else was done towards the adoption of a regular system of practice until the year 1846, when the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly was authorized to cause an inquiry to be made into the system pursued in the House of Commons, with a view to the preparation of a system of Standing Orders and practice adapted to the circumstances of the Province.† The result of this was laid on the table of the House in the following Session, in the shape of a Report, prepared by Mr. Alpheus Todd, the present Librarian of the Canadian House of Commons, giving a full and lucid explanation of the system of practice in operation in the Imperial Parliament, and submitting a code of orders and regulations such as appeared suitable to the requirements of Canada.* No immediate action was taken upon this Report, but in the same Session the practice of referring both petitions and bills to the Committee on Private Bills indiscriminately was discontinued, and petitions were from that time referred to the Committee on Standing Orders, for proof of a compliance with the Rules of the House. In 1850, a Private Bill Office was established, in pursuance of a suggestion contained in the above-mentioned Report, and a system of practice organised, which, with some few modifications subsequently in the details, is that now in use.

Private
Bill Office.

Up to the year 1861, no regulations had been made by the Legislative Council of Canada concerning private bills, except to require an official report to the Speaker of the notices given on petitions, and the payment of a fee on all such bills as originated in that House: but in the Session of 1861, a conference was held between the two Houses, which led to the adoption, by the Council, of the Private Bill Rules of the Assembly verbatim et literatim.† These Rules were slightly modified in succeeding Sessions, and, in the first Session of the Parliament of Canada held under the authority of the "British North America Act, 1867," they were adopted by both Houses, with some further modifications as regards the Commons, which were not made in the Rules of the Senate; the Rules as adopted by each House, will be found at the end of this work, (Appendix I,) together with certain additional Rules of the Senate relating to Divorce Bills. (Appendix II.)

The practice of the two Houses being thus made almost identical, the account given in the following pages, of the proceedings on Petitions and Bills in the Lower House, will apply substantially to the Upper, any diversity of practice between the two Houses being specially pointed out in the appropriate place. It should be stated, however, that the fee is charged only in the House in which the bill originates,* and all expenses for printing and translation being exacted at the same time, no payment is required to be made in the other House, except in cases where a bill is ordered to be reprinted, when the expense must be borne by its promoters. As a general rule, private bills may originate in either House, but it being the exclusive right of the Commons to impose and appropriate all charges imposed upon the people, every bill which involves any tax, rate, toll, or duty, ought to be first brought into that House.* It has followed from this restriction that by far the greater number of private bills have been first passed by the Lower House.† It may be worthy of consideration whether it might not be desirable, in this country, also to include bills relating to Banking in this category, as they are necessarily subject to the supervision of the Minister of Finance, who has always a seat in the Commons. The Lords have generally originated naturalization, name, estate, and divorce bills,‡ but this has not been the practice with the Upper House, in this country, save only as regards divorce bills, which have invariably been introduced first into that House.

The House of Commons of Great Britain, by a Standing Order of 1858 (No. 67), have provided that the Chairman of Ways and Means, shall, at the commencement of each Session, confer with the Chairman of Committees of the House of Lords, for the purpose of determining in which

2.—DEFINITION OF A PRIVATE BILL.

Every bill for the particular interest or benefit of any person or persons, is treated as a private bill, whether it be for the interest of an individual, a public company or corporation, a parish, a city, a county, or other locality; * it is equally distinguished from a measure of public policy in which the whole community are interested, and this distinction is marked by the solicitation of private bills by the parties whose interests are concerned.†

Distinction
between Public and Private
Bills.

There is a class of bills, however, which, though local or special in their operation, yet having been solicited by persons not in the interest of the parties to be affected by their operation, or having been introduced upon public grounds, have been treated by the Legislature as public bills. Bills of this class have occasionally been introduced as private, and referred to the Standing Committee on Private Bills, but upon their report that they were public, rather than private in their character, they have been referred by the House to another committee, and treated otherwise as public bills.* It must be obvious, however, that on bills of this nature, the same notice should be required as upon a private bill, with the exception only of such as are introduced upon some well-defined principle of public policy or right.

In 1858, the Committee on Private Bills reported, with reference to a bill to attach certain newly surveyed townships to the County of Victoria, that they were in doubt whether the bill came within their province, inasmuch as it affected the Territorial Divisions of the Province, the Representation, and the administration of Justice ; but they prepared such amendments as appeared to them desirable, and left it to the House to consider whether action should be taken on their report or not. The House took the bill into consideration with the proposed amendments, and treated it therefore as a private bill.† In 1864, the same course was taken (with a like result) in

It concerned the harbours of Dover, Ramsgate, Whitby and Bridlington, abolished passing tolls, transferred the control of those harbours to the Board of Trade, imposed tolls, and repealed local Acts; but, being a measure of general policy, its character was not changed by the fact that these harbours only came under its operation.

Some bills, though strictly private, having been introduced irregularly (i. e., not based upon petition, in the usual way), the committee have declined to proceed upon them.§ In 1864, a bill to enable the Church Societies and Incorporated Synods of the Church of England Dioceses in Canada to sell the Rectorial lands in the said Dioceses, having been sent down by the Legislative Council, objection was taken at the second reading, that the bill was a private one, and should have been brought in on a petition; and the objection being sustained, the bill was not proceeded with.* In 1866, objection was taken, ^{Perth Debt Bill.} at the second reading, to a bill to extend the time for paying the debt of the County of Perth (due to the Municipal Loan Fund) that it, though a private bill, affected the public revenue, and should therefore have originated in committee of the whole; and the objection was fatal to the bill.† It has been held that a bill commenced as a private bill cannot be taken up and proceeded with as a public bill.‡

The proceedings observed in the Imperial Par- ^{Difference between Imperial and Canadian practice.}liament in the passage of private bills, are necessarily somewhat complicated in their character, in consequence of the numerous checks imposed for the protection of the many interests which they may affect or involve; and the expense attending these proceedings is considerable: but the different circumstances of this country, as one but newly settled, allowing a freer scope for enterprise, with comparatively little risk of infringing upon existing rights or privileges, admit (for a time at least) of a much simpler and more inexpensive system of Private Bill legislation. In explaining the system adopted (after various modifications) by our Legislature, it is proposed to state the various forms and proceedings so far as can conveniently be done, in the order in which they occur, from the presentation of the petition (in either House) to the final passage of the bill. It will be convenient for this purpose to begin with the House of Commons, but the course observed in either House being now identical (with the exception of proceedings upon Divorce Bills in the Upper House, which are described in the latter part of this work, and certain matters of detail with reference to private bills generally, which are noticed in the proper place), the description will apply equally to bills originating in the Senate.

3.—LEGISLATIVE JURISDICTION

REGARDING PRIVATE BILLS.

By the provisions of "The British North America Act, 1867," certain classes of Private Bills are placed under the exclusive control of the Parliament of the Dominion, and certain others are transferred to the Provincial Legislatures.

The classes of subjects which, under this arrangement, pertain exclusively to the Parliament of the Dominion, are thus defined by the Act: Subjects under control of Parliament.

Sec. 91.—Ferries between a Province and any British or Foreign Country, or between two Provinces.

Banking, Incorporation of Banks, and the issue of Paper Money.

Savings Banks.

Patents of Invention and Discovery.

Naturalization and Aliens.

Marriage and Divorce,—and

Such classes of subjects as are expressly excepted

Subjects

control of ment.

in the enumeration of the classes of subjects by this Act assigned exclusively to the Legislatures of the Provinces; which exceptions are thus defined, in

Sec. 92, Sub-section 10:

- a.* Lines of Steam or other Ships, Railways, Canals, Telegraphs, and other Works and Undertakings connecting the Province with any other or others of the Provinces, or extending beyond the limits of the Province :
- b.* Lines of Steam Ships between the Province and any British or Foreign Country :
- c.* Such Works as, although wholly situate within the Province, are before or after their execution declared by the Parliament of Canada to be for the general advantage of Canada, or for the advantage of two or more of the Provinces.

Subjects
under control of Provincial Legislatures.

Those which are placed under the exclusive control of the Provincial Legislatures are thus defined :

Sec. 92, Sub-sec. 10.—Local Works and Undertakings, other than such as form the exceptions above recited.

Sub-sec. 11.—The incorporation of Companies with Provincial objects.

Sub-sec. 16.—Generally all matters of a merely local or private nature in the Province.

It will be observed that the line of distinction is defined clearly with regard to certain classes of subjects only. Sub-section 10 empowers the Parliament of Canada to assume the control of any works wholly situate within one Province, that may be declared by that Body to be for the advantage of the Dominion, or of two or more Provinces. Two instances of this occurred in the first Session of Parliament, in the case of the Bill to incorporate the proprietors of the Ottawa and Prescott Railway, by the name of "The St. Lawrence and Ottawa Railway Company," and the Bill respecting the Northern Railway of Canada—in the enactment of each of which bills, Parliament declared that the Railway therein referred to was "a work for the general advantage of Canada."* The first mentioned bill contained a provision empowering the St. Lawrence and Ottawa Railway Company to build a bridge over the River Ottawa, and to construct a branch to Lake Deschesnes, in the Province of Quebec; but it was argued, in debate, that this would not in itself justify legislation by the Parliament of Canada, in reference to a Railway situate wholly within one Province, as it might afford a dangerous precedent to parties desirous of evading the jurisdiction of the Local Legislatures over works of a purely local character; and the course was adopted of introducing the clause above mentioned, in order to bring the bill properly within the jurisdiction of the Parliament of the Dominion.

Works declared to be for the general advantage.

All Railways intersecting
Grand Trunk should be under same control.

These Railways are, thus far, the only ones of a local character that have been legislated upon by Parliament; but an impression would appear to prevail, that all Railways intersecting the Grand Trunk should be under the same Parliamentary control, to avoid the serious difficulties and inconveniences that might arise (so long as they are subject to a different jurisdiction) from conflicting regulations in reference to the running of trains, inspection of Railway, gauge, and other matters of detail.

Works extending beyond limits of a Province.

There is a class of Railways and other works included among those placed by section 92 (subsec. 10, a), under the exclusive control of the Parliament of the Dominion, that is referred to with some little ambiguity. The section reads "Lines of Steam or other ships, Railways, &c., connecting the Province with any other or others of the Provinces, or extending beyond the limits of the Province." It is clear that the words "extending beyond the limits of the Province" cannot have been intended to apply to works merely connecting two adjacent Provinces, because they are described in the words immediately preceding. Nor, on the other hand, can they refer to any Railway or other work actually extending into a foreign country, because, in the very nature of things, no such power of extension can be conferred by Canadian legislation. It would appear therefore that these words must have reference to such Railways, Telegraphs, or other works, as lead directly into a foreign country, such, for example, as the Great Western Railway, which connects directly with the United States Railway system, both at the Niagara Falls Suspension Bridge, and also at Detroit,—the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway, connecting with United States Railways at Buffalo,—the Montreal and Champlain Railway, connecting at Rouse's Point with the Vermont Central, &c.

Several bills were passed by Parliament, in the Session of 1867-8, relating to works of this class, viz. :—To amend the Act for the incorporation of the North-west Navigation and Railway Co. (a Company empowered, among other things, to navigate Lakes Huron and Superior within the limits of Canada),—To confirm a By-law passed by the Directors of the Lake Memphremagog Navigation Company (whose steamers ply on a lake partly within the territory of the United States),—To incorporate the Clifton Suspension Bridge Co. (international),—and to authorize the carrying of gas pipes across the River Niagara, in order to facilitate the lighting of the Town of Clifton with gas (international). As none of these bills contained the "general advantage" clause, it may be assumed that the construction put by Parliament upon the provisions of the Imperial Act in regard to bills of this class agrees with that above suggested.

Companies
for doing business throughout the Dominion.

There is another class of bills, concerning which serious doubts have arisen in regard to jurisdiction, namely, those for the incorporation of companies for the transaction of business of any kind throughout the Dominion. Sub-section 11 (above quoted) assigns to the Provincial Legislatures "the incorporation of companies with Provincial objects." In the first Session of the Parliament of the Dominion, several petitions were presented in reference to the incorporation, &c., of Insurance and other private companies. Upon two of these, praying respectively for the incorporation of the Gore District Mutual Fire Insurance Company, and of the Sorghum Growers' Association of the County of Essex, the Committee on Standing Orders (Commons) reported, in each case, that in their opinion the matter "came more properly within the jurisdiction of the Local Legislature of Ontario."* On the other hand, petitions for the incorporation of

* 5th and 8th Reports of Committee on Standing Orders (Commons), 1867-8.

the Merchants' Express Company of the Dominion of Canada,—for the incorporation of the Canadian Lake Underwriters' Association,—and for amending the Acts relating to the Canada West Farmers' Mutual and Stock Insurance Company, and changing the name to the Canada Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company, were reported upon favorably, and bills, introduced upon them, were passed, and became law.* Another petition, for an Act to grant certain powers to the Civil Service Building and Savings Society, was reported on favorably by the Standing Orders Committee of each House, and a bill introduced in the Commons. This bill was subsequently referred to the Committee on Banking and Commerce, who, after discussing, in committee, the question of jurisdiction, presented a report to the House, representing that “doubts had arisen as to whether the objects sought to be obtained by the promoters were not Provincial in their character, and such as the Local Legislature is exclusively empowered to deal with,”† and soliciting instruction on the subject. A similar proceeding took place on the part of the Private Bill Committee of the Senate, who presented a tion of ju-

report of a like nature in reference to a Bill to incorporate the Intercolonial Insurance Company.* A discussion ensued upon the Report, which resulted in the appointment of a committee "to inquire into and report to this House on the classes of Acts for the incorporation of private companies, which properly, under the 'British North America Act, 1867,' come within the jurisdiction of the Parliament of the Dominion, and to act on behalf of this House as Members of any Joint Committee of the Senate and House of Commons, which may be ordered on the subject."† No committee was appointed on the part of the Commons, and no further steps were taken with regard to either of the above mentioned bills.

Status of Provincial corporations.

It was urged, on the part of the promoters of these bills, that the companies to which they related were desirous of transacting business in different parts of the Dominion, and were therefore in need of more extensive and general powers than could be conferred upon them by a Provincial Legislature, and, in short, that they were not properly of the class referred to in Subsection 11 of the Act, as "Companies with Provincial objects." Against this it was argued that a Provincial Charter would suffice to ensure their recognition in every Province where their Agencies might be established ; and that under such a charter they could sue and be sued, and transact all business of an ordinary character. In opposition to this view, a case was cited by the Honorable Mr. Campbell, in the debate in the Senate on the Bill to incorporate the Intercolonial Insurance Company, having an immediate bearing upon the question as to the status in one Province of a company incorporated by the Legislature of another Province. The case referred to was an action brought, in the Court of King's Bench of Upper Canada, by the Bank of Montreal, in the year 1836 (prior to the Union of Upper and Lower Canada), for the recovery of the amount of certain promissory notes, the drawers and endorsers of which resided in Upper Canada. The Court ruled that "a foreign corporation, such as a Bank, cannot maintain an action upon promissory notes received and discounted by them in the course of banking business in this Province, although they may maintain an action for money had and received to their use, against the person for whom such notes were discounted, and to whom money was advanced upon them."*

* Report of Committee on Standing Orders and Private Bills (Senate), 5th Dec., 1867.

† Senate Journal, 12th Dec., 1867.

Case of Montreal
Bank vs.
Bethune,
1836.

* Bank of Montreal vs. Bethune, Hilary Term, 6 Wm. 4. (See Robinson & Harrison's Digest, p. 123.)

By this decision it would appear, that whatever status a company, owing its existence to a Provincial Charter, may possess beyond the limits of its own Province, there are limitations and restrictions which can only be obviated by special legislation in each Province. Banking Companies are, by the Act, placed under the exclusive control of the Parliament of the Dominion, and it may be found advisable, with a view of meeting the difficulty, that all commercial companies doing business of such a nature as to require the establishment of agencies in the different Provinces of the Dominion, should be placed under the same jurisdiction.

Foreign
corporations in England and United States.

Angell & Ames, in their "Treatise on the Law of Private Corporations aggregate," (6th edition, Boston, 1858,) shew (in treating on the powers of foreign corporations, s. 372), that "a company, claiming to be incorporated, has only to shew that it has been regularly and effectually made a corporate body, to enable it to sustain a suit beyond the jurisdiction within which it is constituted." They cite the case of the Dutch West India Company,—that of the National Bank of St. Charles, in Spain, and other analogous cases, in which it was decided by the English Courts, that a foreign corporation may maintain a suit in England by their corporate name. In the United States also, it is shewn (s. 373), that the power of a corporation to sue, in the respective States, is not restricted to companies created by the laws of the State in which the suit is instituted, but may be exercised by foreign corporations, belonging either to another State of the Confederacy, or to a foreign country. It is, however, admitted that this power is exercised rather upon sufferance than of right, as "the Legislature undoubtedly has power to prohibit foreign corporations (i. e., those not created by the laws of the State) from contracting in the State ; but until it does so, contracts so made will be enforced." (s. 374.) But instances are given in which the powers of foreign corporations were restricted by the Courts without such Legislative intervention. In Ohio, the Court ruled (in re Bank of Marietta vs. Pindalf), that "though, as a general rule, a corporation created by the laws of one State might sue in another, it would not be permitted to a Bank in Ohio to establish an agency in Virginia for discounting notes, or for carrying on any other banking operations; nor could they sustain an action on any note thus acquired by them," though they admitted "there was nothing in the policy of the laws of Virginia which restrained its citizens from borrowing money from a Bank in Ohio," &c. It was also held, by the Supreme Court of the State of New York, "that a foreign corporation, keeping an office in that State, for receiving deposits and discounting notes, without being expressly authorized by the laws of that State to do so, cannot maintain an action for the money loaned."

Difference between Constitutions of Canada
and United States.

These, it is true, are but rare and exceptional cases, yet they (with that relating to the Montreal Bank, before referred to), serve to shew that the powers of a corporation, beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the legislature creating it, are, in fact, exercised by permission rather than right, and are therefore subject to restriction or curtailment at any time. In considering what may be the true position of corporations created in this country under Provincial authority, it is well to bear in mind the very important difference that exists between the Constitution of the Dominion of Canada and that of the United States in regard to "State rights:" while, in the latter, the sovereignty of each State, in all matters of internal policy, is distinctly recognized and admitted, and all rights not expressly assigned by the constitution to the Federal Government are exercised by the Sovereign State,—under the constitution of Canada, the Sovereignty is expressly vested in the Government and Parliament of the Dominion, who have exclusive control over all matters not assigned exclusively to the Legislatures of the Provinces (British North America Act, sec. 91, class 29). This can hardly fail to have some effect upon the status of Corporations holding Provincial Charters, in any transactions they may have beyond the limits of their own Province. The Legislature of Ontario, at their first Session, in incorporating the Royal Canadian Insurance Company, expressly restricted their operations to risks "within the Province of Ontario." Insurance business, like that of Banks, is not confined to a particular locality, but is necessarily spread over the country, and the larger companies would probably desire to extend their operations over the greater part of the Dominion, and even beyond it (as regards Marine Insurance); it is therefore of importance to them that their corporate powers should proceed from the highest legislative authority in the land. A Bill respecting Insurance Companies,* passed in the first Session of the Parliament of Canada, requires all such companies to obtain a licence from the Minister of Finance, and to invest a large proportion of their paid-up capital in Dominion Stock, and contains other provisions for securing the proper management of the

Insurance Companies.

* At one stage of this bill an objection was made, that it was beyond the jurisdiction of the House, which was over-ruled by Mr. Speaker; at another stage, a motion "that the regulation of Insurance Companies is a subject properly within the jurisdiction of the Provincial Legislatures," was proposed and negatived. Com. Journal, 1867-8, pp. 161, 426.

companies. This affords an additional reason why it is desirable that Insurance Companies should be created by the same authority that exercises over them such stringent control.

Boards of Trade.

In the first Session of the Legislature of Ontario, an Act was passed to incorporate the Guelph Board of Trade. In the first Session of the Parliament of the Dominion, a bill was introduced to incorporate the Stratford Board of Trade; the bill was referred to the Committee on Banking and Commerce, and the question of jurisdiction being raised in committee, the committee came to the conclusion that though the Board to be created was a local Board, the terms of the 91st section of the "British America Act," in placing "the Regulation of Trade and Commerce" under the control of Parliament, justified the action of this Legislature in the matter. In examining the details of the bill, however, it was found to contain provisions for the establishment of a Court of Arbitration in commercial matters; and as "the constitution, maintenance, and organization of Provincial Courts, both of civil and criminal jurisdiction," are, by the 92nd section of the said Act assigned exclusively to the Provincial Legislatures, the committee expunged from the bill so much as related to a Court of Arbitration, and it was passed in the amended form.

It is much to be desired that steps should be taken without delay to determine more accurately the question of jurisdiction, either by the action of the Canadian Parliament, or, if that be deemed insufficient, by invoking the interposition of the Imperial Parliament, to pass an explanatory Act.

Settlement of questions of jurisdiction.

As a preliminary step, it might be advisable to appoint a committee (upon which the various interests, Provincial and Dominional, should be duly represented), for the purpose of carefully considering the whole question of jurisdiction, and suggesting such amendments to the British America Act as may be found desirable, in order to determine doubtful points. Upon their report, an address to the Crown could be voted, soliciting the passage of an explanatory Act by the Imperial Parliament.

Another mode of meeting the difficulty has been suggested, viz. : that each bill upon which a doubt as to jurisdiction might be raised, should be discussed, and the point decided upon its own merits ; and that in this manner a series of precedents would be established for future guidance. Not to mention other objections that might exist to this course, there is one that cannot be overlooked, viz., that the legislation of the Dominion Parliament cannot legally over-ride or interfere with the rights and privileges of the Provincial Legislatures, save in certain exceptional matters, as public works, and education ; such powers as are vested in the Local Legislature being (with these exceptions) exclusively assigned to them, any proceeding or decision of Parliament upon a matter in any way exceeding its jurisdiction, instead of forming a precedent, will, in all probability, lead to the interposition of the Courts, and perhaps involve endless litigation. It is therefore of the utmost importance, that any attempt that may be made to deal with the question of jurisdiction, should be undertaken with due caution and deliberation.

4.—PARLIAMENTARY AGENTS.

In the Imperial Parliament, every private bill or petition must be solicited by a Parliamentary Agent, who conducts the bill through its various stages, and is personally responsible to the House and to the Speaker for the observance of the rules, orders, and practice of Parliament, and for the payment of all fees and charges: and no proceeding upon any petition or bill can take place, until an appearance to act as the Parliamentary Agent upon the same shall have been entered in the Private Bill Office.* This practice of employing Parliamentary Agents has been but recently introduced in Canada, and it has not hitherto been made obligatory, though the increase of business may possibly render it desirable to adopt some such course, in order that members may be relieved from a duty that is often inconvenient and embarrassing, and frequently involves a sacrifice of time and trouble, which should not in fairness be expected of them.

Mode of qualifying.

In the revised code of Rules prepared by the late Sir Henry Smith (then Speaker), and adopted by the Assembly of 1860, provision was made for the recognition of Parliamentary Agents, who had up to that time acted in a private and irresponsible capacity. No person is now permitted to Act as Parliamentary Agent, without the express sanction and authority of the Speaker.* This having been obtained, he is required to sign a declaration before the Chief Clerk of the Private Bill Office, engaging to observe and obey all the Rules of the House, and to pay all fees and charges, when demanded, and further, to enter into a recognizance in $2,000 (if required at any future time by the Speaker) conditioned to observe such declaration. His name is then registered in a book, and he is entitled to act as a Parliamentary Agent, but is liable to an absolute or temporary prohibition to practise (at the pleasure of the Speaker), for any wilful violation of the Rules and practice of Parliament, or of any rules prescribed by the Speaker. Every private bill is based on a petition,* which should state, in general terms, the objects or privileges sought to be obtained by the parties soliciting the bill, and be signed by the parties themselves (the signatures of agents on behalf of others being inadmissible, except in case of incapacity by sickness); and at least one signature should be on the same sheet on which the petition is written.† The petition is presented by a Member in his place.‡ Petitions should be prepared in triplicate, one copy being presented in each House by a Member, and a third addressed to the Governor General in Council, through the Secretary of State. Appendix, No. III.) In 1859 a Bill to incorporate the Guelph and Wellington Roads Company, was sent down by the Legislative Council, and was subsequently referred to the Committee on Private Bills, who finding that it was not founded on a petition, reported that the preamble was not proved. In 1862, a Bill to separate the township of Broughton from the County of Megantic, and to annex it to the County of Beauce, which had been introduced as a public bill (under a public title), was referred to the committee, who reported that it was not based on a petition, and could not therefore be treated as a private bill; and no further proceeding was taken on the bill by the House.

Bills which had not been based on a petition.

The petition must be presented within the first three weeks of the Session.* It was formerly the custom to extend this time, by Resolution, to a very late period of the Session, but the injurious tendency of such an extension has become so evident, from the necessity it frequently involves of dispensing with those formalities which are so necessary for the protection of private rights, that of late years there has been evinced an increasing unwillingness to extend the period. While in 1858, it was extended to 85 days from the commencement of the Session; in 1859 and

* 49th Rule.

1860, it was extended to 63, and in 1861 to 36 days only; the latter being but 15 days beyond the time fixed by the Rule. In 1867-8, an adjournment from December to March having been determined upon, the time for receiving petitions was extended to three weeks after the re-assembling of Parliament, and subsequently to the end of the then current month.

After expiration of time.

When the time has actually expired, parties are at liberty to present a petition, asking leave to introduce their petition for a private bill notwithstanding such expiry, and explaining the circumstances under which they have been prevented from complying with the orders of the House.* It is competent then to the House, either to grant the requisite permission upon motion,† or, in accordance with the practice in the Imperial Parliament,‡ to refer the matter to the Standing Orders Committee, and take action upon their report. In 1866, the House extended the time in favor of a particular application only.§

6.--PROOF OF NOTICES,

BEFORE COMMITTEE ON STANDING ORDERS.

All petitions for private bills, when received by the House, are taken into consideration (without special reference) by the Committee on Standing Orders, whose duty it is to ascertain whether the Rule of the House in regard to the publication of notice has been complied with in each case, and to report to the House the result of their inquiries; together with any recommendation that may appear to them desirable in cases where the notice may prove in any respect informal or insufficient.* The committee has no power to inquire into the merits of any such petition, this being a duty which pertains to the Private Bill Committee in considering the preamble of the bill.†

In 1862, the Legislative Assembly (in pursuance of a recommendation of the Standing Orders Committee in their 10th Report) appointed the Chief Clerk of the Private Bill Office their “Examiner for Standing Orders,” assigning to him the duty of examining into the facts with regard to the notice given on each petition, and reporting the same for the information of the Committee on Standing Orders; and the practice is continued under the new arrangements since Confederation. The committee are then enabled, upon the evidence reported to them, to decide upon each case. This corresponds with the course taken in the Imperial Parliament;† it has been adopted, as yet, only by the Lower House, and is a step towards the assimilation of our Canadian practice to that of the two Houses of the Imperial Parliament for the joint proof of their Standing Orders.‡

of publicity, when no notice is given.

In the fulfilment of their duty of examining into the notices given by the promoters of private bills in compliance with the 51st and 52nd Rules, the Committee on Standing Orders have generally been guided rather by the spirit than the letter of the requirement. In every case where the formal notice proves to have been insufficient, or to have been omitted altogether, they have admitted evidence to shew that all parties whose interests may be affected by the matter in question, have been fully informed of the intention to apply to Parliament. In admitting the propriety of such a distinction in the interpretation of the Rules, it must nevertheless be remembered that parties at a distance who may be aware of an existing informality, may be led to suppose that it will be fatal to the measure, and may therefore neglect to take any steps to oppose it, relying upon the House to carry out its own Standing Orders. This has, in fact, been the case in several instances, and a knowledge of it generally acts upon the committee in exercising their judgment as to the admissability of evidence of this kind. When the committee have become satisfied in this manner concerning a notice thus technically defective or informal, they have in some instances taken upon themselves to waive the informality, and to report the notice as sufficient. Thus, publication of the proceedings at a public meeting called to consider a certain question, or some other public notice,* discussions in reference thereto in a City Council, reported in the local papers,† or service of notice on the shareholders of a company individually, or evidence of the knowledge or consent of parties affected,‡ have been held to be a sufficient substitute for the notice required by the Rule. Suspension of Rule relative to notice.

The above cases must however be considered as altogether exceptional; while the committee may, in their discretion, interpret the Rules in the most liberal sense, they have no power to dispense with the formalities required by the House. When, after due examination, they consider it desirable to relax these formalities in any particular case, they report the facts to the House, and recommend a suspension of the Rule. The principal grounds upon which a suspension has been recommended may be thus stated:—Evidence of consent of parties interested, || —That practice for the House to suspend, in a particular case, the Rule relative to Notice, upon a motion to that effect, without any previous action on the part of the Standing Orders Committee; but in that year the committee made a report, representing that the practice of indiscriminately dispensing with these notices must have a most injurious tendency, and suggesting that in future no motion for suspending the Rule in any special case be passed, until the matter in question should have been favorably reported on by the committee; this being acceded to by the House, was acted upon for the remainder of that Session. A similar recommendation made in the following year, was modified by the House so as to provide that no motion for suspending the Rule in favor of any petition be entertained, until the committee shall have reported on the subject, favorably or otherwise; and this is now provided for in the 55th Rule.

In judging as to the sufficiency of a notice submitted for their examination, the committee compare its terms with those of the petition, and any important variance or omission in the former is fatal either to the whole measure, or to a particular provision therein, as the case may be. In some instances the notice (though published in the prescribed manner in other respects) has been unfavorably reported on because it did not sufficiently indicate the objects sought to be attained. † This was the case with a petition for an amendment to the Act incorporating the Galt and Guelph Railway Company in 1858; on examining the petition, the amendment was found to embrace a provision for giving the holders of certain bonds issued by the company before mortgaging their road to the Great Western Railway Company, a remedy against the last mentioned company, and this not having been mentioned in the notice, it was pronounced insufficient.* In another instance,† upon an application for amendments to the Act dividing Chatham into two municipalities, the notice simply referred to the Act, as 19 & 20 Vic., cap. 105, without mentioning the subject, and this was pronounced insufficient. In the same Session, the committee called the attention of the House (in one of their reports) to the utter insufficiency of a notice given in this form, and recommended “that in future, no notice be considered sufficient that does not clearly indicate the nature and subject of the application.”‡ This recommendation has been acted upon by the committee ever since; and in 1862 the (51st) Rule was so amended as to require every notice to be of this character.

In 1865, in reporting on the petition of the Peel General Manufacturing Company, for certain amendments to their charter, the committee stated that the notice was sufficient for ordinary amendments, but called the attention of the House to one of a peculiar nature, under which shareholders in the company might claim a relaxation of the Patent Laws in favor of their own inventions, when intended to be used in connection with the company. The promoters did not proceed with the bill.

having petitioned for an Act to legalize their By-law granting aid to a certain railway, presented a further petition, praying that the Rule requiring notice might be suspended in their case ; and the Committee on Standing Orders, having considered the last mentioned petition, reported that no sufficient reason had been urged to induce them to recommend a suspension of the Rule.

In one case* the committee reported that the notice ought not to be dispensed with, but that a bill might be introduced for the relief of the petitioner, by extending in his favor the time for appealing against a decision of the Trinity Board. The bill was accordingly introduced, but was subsequently dropped. In another case† the committee reported that a charter proposed to be amended had become void by non user ; and the House justified the report by taking no further action in the matter.

In the Session of 1867-8 (after Confederation), the committee reported, with reference to two petitions, that they appeared to come more properly within the jurisdiction of the Local Legislature,‡ and they were not proceeded with

Other parties cannot avail themselves of a notice.

It may be well to state, that the committee (though not reporting any such case to the House) has repeatedly decided that parties having a diverse interest from those by whom a notice has been published, cannot avail themselves of such notice to proceed upon their own account; among other cases, this decision was given in regard to the Sault Ste. Marie Canal in 1851, and Gage's Will case in 1862, to the knowledge of the writer.

Petitions referred back.

After an unfavorable report from the committee, the House has, in a few instances,* referred petitions back to the committee, with an instruction to consider and report as to the expediency of suspending the Rule. In one case only† was their report favorable; and though in this instance the Rule was suspended, and a bill introduced, it was subsequently abandoned.

Further Report, amending a former one.

It has occasionally happened, that after certain petitions have been unfavorably reported on, further evidence has been produced, sufficient to satisfy the committee. In such cases they have made a further report, amending the former one, and representing either that the notice has since 7.—PRESENTATION AND FIRST READING OF BILL.

Presentation of Bill.

When a petition has been favorably reported on by the Committee on Standing Orders, a bill may be introduced, upon a motion for leave, upon a Monday, Wednesday or Friday, immediately before the calling of the Orders for private bills* (preceded, when the same is required by the Report, by a motion to suspend the Rules). The bill must be prepared by the promoters, in the English and French languages, and printed † Formerly, such bills only as related to Lower Canada were required to be printed in French, but in 1867 this Rule was made to apply to all bills. The printing of the French version was occasionally dispensed with in bills concerning some locality within the Eastern Townships of L. and distribution thereof made before the first reading.* It is only in the House of Commons, however, that bills are required to be printed at this stage, in conformity to the Rule adopted in 1867. In the Senate they are printed, as heretofore, before the second reading.†

The amount of any rates, tolls, fees or fines inserted in the bill, must be printed in italics; these are technically regarded by the House as blanks, to be filled up by the committee on the bill, and are so inserted merely to shew the amount intended to be proposed.‡

When a bill for confirming any letters patent or agreement is presented, a true copy of the same must be attached thereto.§ A bill of this kind having been referred to the Private Bill Committee in 1857, they reported that they could not recommend that it be passed, because no copy of the letters patent was attached. The omission was, however, rectified by the House, a copy of the letters patent being attached to the bill in committee of the whole, and it finally received the Royal Assent.||

No bill,* originating in that House, of which notice is required to be given under the 51st Rule, can be considered, after such reference, until after ten clear days' notice of the sitting of the committee, affixed in the lobby, and appended also to the Votes. In the case of bills received from the Senate, the notice required is two days only.† Bills not requiring notice under the 51st Rule may be considered at any time after reference.

This is another of the changes effected in 1867: it was adopted with a view to expedite the proceedings on private bills, and to enable the committees to enter at an earlier period upon their labors, and so avoid the accumulation of business too often thrust upon them near the close of the Session. In the Senate, the practice in relation to the reference of bills (which, until that year, was identical in both Houses), remains as heretofore; bills are not referred until after the second reading,‡ and the notice to be given by the committee is one week, upon bills of the Senate,

Bills.

Divorce Bills (which invariably originate in the Upper House) are referred (after their first reading in the Commons) to a selected committee, in place of the Standing Committee on Private Bills.† The evidence taken before the Senate (a copy of which is applied for, and communicated, by message) is referred to the committee, with power to send for persons and papers, and usually, to hear counsel.‡ The committee give two days' notice of their sitting, as in the case of other private bills.

Immediately after the first reading (or, in the Senate, after the second reading), and before the consideration of the bill by the committee, the fee and all other charges thereon, must be paid into the Private Bill Office. This however applies only to bills "giving any exclusive privilege, or for any object of profit, or private, corporate, or individual advantage; or for amending, extending or enlarging any former Acts in such manner as to confer additional powers." On all such bills a fee of $100 is levied, and the promoters are charged with the expense of printing 500 copies of the bill in English and 200 in French, and of printing 500 copies of the Act in English and 250 in French, with the Statutes: this last item is subsequently refunded if the bill should fail to become law.* If the bill has not been prepared in both languages, it is charged with the cost of translation; and any additional expense incurred, for re-printing the bill in an amended form, or for printing sched-

The Fee is payable only in the House in which the bill originates, and the charges for printing are made in the House in which they may be incurred. On Divorce Bills (which originate in the Upper House) the fee of $100 must be deposited in the hands of the Clerk of the Senate at the time of presenting the petition.*

Formerly the amount of the Fee charged on private bills was $60. In 1854-5, the Standing Committee of the Assembly on Contingencies reported a recommendation that the amount should be increased upon all private bills to $200; † and in 1862, the Committee on Private Bills reported‡ in favor of a scale of fees, adopting the existing rate ($60) as the minimum, and charging two rates on bills for raising or expending a sum amounting to $200,000 and under $400,000,—three rates when amounting to $400,000 and under $600,000, and so on in proportion;—but no action was taken by the House on either Report.§ In

It has been customary, upon the rejection or abandonment of a bill, to refund the fees, upon a special motion being made to that effect in the House,—but one instance of a refusal to refund the same having occurred.† The fees have even, in some instances, been refunded at a subsequent Session.‡

In 1863, a recommendation of the Committee on Private Bills, that for the future, no motion for remitting the fee upon any bill be entertained, except upon the recommendation of the committee,§ was concurred in by the House; and it has since been generally acted upon.

Proceedings continued to another Session.

Standing

bills.

It has been already stated that all private bills before the House of Commons are referred, after the first reading, either to the Standing Committee on Private Bills, or to that on Banking and Commerce, or that on Railways, Canals, and Telegraph lines, or to some other Standing Committee of a similar character.* These committees are appointed early in the Session, and continue in existence until its close.† They each consist of a large

* In 1866, the Bill respecting the Bar of Lower Canada was referred to a select committee.

† This differs from the practice in the Imperial Parliament, where all railway and canal bills before the Commons are referred, after the second reading, to the “General Committee on Railway and Canal Bills,” and all other private bills to the “Committee of Selection.” The bills are classified in groups by these committees, who severally nominate special committees to consider each group, with one of their own members as chairman. (May, p. 674.) Each member of the committee on an opposed bill is required to sign a declaration that his constituents have no local interest, and that he has no personal interest in the bill, &c. number of members, who are nominated by a committee of selection (for all standing committees), and the nomination confirmed by the House. At their first meeting they proceed to elect a chairman. The quorum consists of a majority of the members, though of late years it has been customary for each committee, after its organization, to make a report recommending a reduction of the quorum,* which has been concurred in by the House. Members may be subsequently added by the House.

Instructions may be given to these committees by the House, concerning particular bills, or other matters.† After referring a bill, the House may, if it think proper, instruct the committee to report it back before consideration.‡ The Private Bill Committee have themselves occasionally reported back bills which they thought might more advantageously be referred to another committee.§ The notice already given by the committee under the 60th Rule, has generally been declared, in such

In all questions arising before the committee, the chairman votes as a member, and whenever the voices are equal, he has a second or casting vote.* This provision was introduced in the revised code of Rules adopted in 1860, and is expressly limited to committees on private bills (including the Standing Committee on Private Bills, and that on Railways, and any other committee to whom private bills may be referred): it is based on Imperial practice.† The Controverted Elections Act of Canada confers the same power on the chairman of an election committee.‡

Every member present in the committee should vote on all questions brought up, judging from the analogy of the practice of the House in this respect,§ and that of Election Committees under the provisions of the above mentioned Act, though in the absence of any express rule or order it may be questioned whether the committee has power to compel a member to vote who declines to do so.||

At each sitting, a list of the bills which are ready for consideration is laid before the committee, in the order of their reference; and they are usually taken up in that order, unless it may be otherwise agreed upon, for the convenience of parties in attendance. In the case of opposed bills, it is customary for the parties to come to an arrangement in the Private Bill Office for the selection of a particular day for the consideration of a bill in which they are interested; and the bill, in such a case, takes precedence of all other bills appointed for that day: where no such arrangement is made, the bill is taken up in its order. Petitioners will not be heard before the committee unless their petition has been prepared and signed in strict conformity with the rules and orders of the House, and has been deposited within the time limited, except where they complain of any matter which may have arisen in committee, or of any proposed amendment, or additional provision. The promoters of a bill may be heard by counsel if they desire it.† Petitioners against the preamble or any of the clauses may be heard by counsel, if, in their petition, they have prayed to be heard by themselves, their counsel, or agent.‡ No member can act as counsel before the House or before any committee; nor can any member of either House act as counsel before the other House, on any bill depending therein, without special permission: when such permission is given, it is understood that the gentlemen who receive it would not be permitted to vote on read.

When the committee are about to proceed to the consideration of a private bill, the parties are called in, and the preamble is read; this being different from the practice in regard to public bills, the preamble of which is postponed until after the consideration of the clauses.* (Instances may, however, arise, in which the committee may feel it desirable that they should reserve their judgment upon the preamble until certain details of the bill have been settled: in such a case they postpone the preamble until after the consideration of the clauses; but this is of very rare occurrence.) The petitions against the bill are then read, and appearances entered

* This course is adopted in regard to public bills, because they are founded on reasons of state policy, and the House having affirmed the principle on the second reading, it becomes the duty of the committee not to discuss the principle again upon the preamble, but to settle the clauses first, and then to consider the preamble in reference to the clauses only. (May, p. 468.) But the expediency of a private bill being mainly founded on the allegations of fact (contained in the preamble) proof of such allegations is necessary, as a proper basis of legislation. (Ib. p. 718.)

upon each petition with which the parties intend to proceed.*

The promoters (or their counsel) first state their case on the preamble, and then (if required) proceed to call witnesses, and to examine them. At the conclusion of this examination, when the counsel or agent for any petitioner rises to cross-examine a witness, is the proper time for taking objections to the locus standi of such petitioner.† It is necessary that a petitioner should state the manner in which his interest is affected, in order that he may obtain a locus standi at all in opposition to the measure; but the grounds of objection to the bill on which he may be heard in support of such opposition, are not confined to those arising immediately out of his private interests.‡

Locus standi of petitioners.

If the committee decide in favor of his locus standi, he may address the committee, and produce his witnesses, and they in their turn are cross-examined by the counsel for the promoters, who has the right to reply.§ The committee may, if they please, hear petitioners against a bill on the ground

A petitioner whose interest is affected only by particular clauses in the bill, which are immaterial to the main objects of the measure, and are not referred to in the preamble, would have no right to be heard against the preamble, but only against such clauses.‡

Members required as witnesses. If the attendance of a member of the House be required as a witness, the proper course is for the chairman to write to the member requesting his attendance ; if he refuse to attend, the fact is reported to the House, in order that they may take such steps in the matter as they see fit.§

When counsel are addressing the committee, or while witnesses are under examination, the committee room is an open court ; but when the committee are about to deliberate, all the counsel, agents, witnesses, and strangers are ordered to withdraw, and the committee sit with closed doors. When they have decided any question, the doors are again opened, and the chairman acquaints the parties with the determination of the committee, if it concern them.*

Members of the House who are not on the committee, have a right to be present during the examination of witnesses, but not to interfere in the proceedings.† It is doubtful how far the committee has a right to exclude them from the room when cleared for discussion, but it is always customary for them to retire.

If any member insist on his right to remain, against the wish of the committee, their only course is to report the circumstances of the case to the House.‡ If a member of the House be under examination as a witness, and the matter under consideration shall have arisen out of his “Previous Question” cannot be put.

It is a rule of Parliamentary practice, that the “previous question” cannot be put in committees, i. e., that if the question were proposed that the preamble is proved, it is not competent for a member to propose the previous question “that that question be now put,” for the purpose of voting against it. The same rule applies, of course, to the clauses, and to any amendments proposed.*

Preamble proved.

When the committee have decided that the preamble has been proved, they call in the parties, acquaint them with the decision, and then go through the bill, clause by clause, and fill up the blanks; and when petitions have been presented against a clause, or proposing amendments, or for compensation, the parties are heard in support of their objections, or amendments, or claims, as they arise. Clauses may be postponed, and considered at a later period in the proceedings, if the committee think fit; or clauses which the parties have agreed to insert in the bill may, if necessary, be produced before the committee decide on the preamble.† Manuscript clauses are con-provisions.

In the case of any bill sent down from the Senate, the committee, if they have not sufficient evidence before them, can direct their chairman to move in the House that a message be sent to their Honors, requesting that the proofs and evidence on which the bill was founded may be communicated; and these, when sent down, are referred to the committee.‡

Harbour, Bridge, or Canal Bills, to be first sanctioned in a committee of the whole, and afterwards referred to the committee on the bill for insertion therein. This appears to have been the usual course prior to the Union, but upon the adoption of a system of Private Bill legislation, it was discontinued. In the Session of 1852-3, this practice was resorted to in a bill to incorporate the Port Burwell Harbour Company,* and was subsequently observed in several instances; though it was always the exception rather than the rule. The inconvenience of this practice is most evident, as it is manifest that the committee of the whole can, at that early stage of the bill, have no sufficient evidence to guide them in establishing the rates of toll; while on the other hand, the committee on the bill have it in their power to procure all necessary information: when they report the amended bill, it is referred (after the second reading) to a committee of the whole, and an opportunity afforded to the House of exercising its judgment in the matter. Moreover tolls of this kind are imposed only upon such persons as may voluntarily use the works to be constructed under the authority of the bill, as a fair equivalent for a service rendered, and are thus altogether different in their character from a com-

Time for reports limited.

The 49th Rule, while it limits the time for receiving petitions and private bills, respectively, also provides that no report of any standing or select committee upon a private bill be received after the first six weeks, but this period is invariably extended until nearly the close of the Session.

11.—SECOND READING OF BILL.

By the 66th Rule of the House of Commons, all private bills reported from a standing committee are placed on the Orders of the Day following the reception of the report,* for a second reading, next after bills referred to a committee of the whole House,—though they are usually taken up only on “Private Bill” days; the only exception being in the case of bills on which the committee have reported the preamble not proven, which are not placed on the Orders of the Day at all, unless by special order of the House.

The second reading corresponds with the same stage in other bills, and in agreeing to it the House affirms the principle of the measure.† There is an important distinction between public and private bills at this stage of the proceedings; a public bill being founded on reasons of public policy, the House, in agreeing to its second reading, accepts and affirms those reasons; but the expediency of a private bill is mainly founded upon allegations of fact, to be proved before a committee. It was formerly the practice, in each House, to refer the bill after the second reading; the affirmation of the principle of the bill, therefore, was necessary conditional, being contingent upon satisfactory proof being made of the allegations of the preamble. In 1867, the House of Commons changed their Rule in this respect, and provided for a reference of the bill after the first reading,*—the second reading being postponed until after the committee had reported. By this arrangement the House is put in possession, before the second reading, of the facts of the case, and is therefore in a position to deal with the bill upon its merits. This change has not been adopted as yet, by the Senate, and bills before that House are referred, as heretofore, after the second reading.†

Hearing of Counsel.

The usual time for counsel to be heard at the Bar of the House upon a bill (pro or con.) is at the second reading; but opposition has rarely been offered, hitherto, at this stage, unless upon the assumption that the principle of the proposed measure was objectionable on grounds of public policy.* Upon four occasions only, in Canada, has counsel been heard at the Bar against the second reading of private bills.† In one instance, ‡ the House resolved (upon petitions from the parties) to hear counsel, for and against the bill, upon the question for going into committee of the whole thereon: this having been (under the arrangements then in force) the first opportunity afforded for the action of the House after the report of the committee, corresponded, in point of fact (as regarded the time for hearing opposition) with the second reading under the new arrangement. The bill having been reported by the committee with amendments, they were directed to report the evidence, and the same was printed, with the bill in its amended shape. The Order of the Day for the House in committee on the bill, being read, counsel was called in and heard: it was then moved "that this House will resolve itself into the said committee on this day three months:" the consideration of this motion was postponed, and the bill was subsequently abandoned. It may be here observed, that a motion to postpone the consideration of a bill for three or six months, offered at any stage, is, if agreed to, equivalent to a rejection of the bill for that Session.*

Private
Bill days, Commons.

Private Bills on the Orders of the Day, in the House of Commons, are called up on Mondays, immediately after the daily routine of business; on Wednesdays and Fridays they are called for the first hour, at the evening sitting; while on Tuesdays and Thursdays they do not appear on the Orders at all.† Private Bills in the hands of members of the Administration, are placed among the "Government Orders" on Government days (Tuesdays and Fridays). In the Senate, no days are specially appointed for the consideration of private bills, but they come up from day to day, according to their relative position upon the Orders of the Day.

12.—PROCEEDINGS IN COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

All Private Bills, after the second reading, are at once referred to a committee of the whole House, for consideration on some future day.* ^{Reference to committee of whole.} Several bills may be considered in committee at the same time.†

Counsel may be heard at the Bar of the House, at this or any other stage,‡ but the usual time is at the second reading. (See Remarks on this subject, under "Second Reading of Bill," ante, p. 98.) ^{Hearing of Counsel.}

reject any bill after it has been reported by a select committee, and to amend or reject any of the amendments agreed to by the committee, practically this right is rarely exercised. The inability of the House to discuss a private bill upon its merits in the absence of such information as evidence alone can supply, renders its reference to a select committee indispensable; and the House practically delegates its responsibility to that committee, and almost invariably accepts their decision. The principle thus acted upon by our Canadian Legislature, has been established in the Imperial Parliament as the result of a very long experience in private bill legislation. The Right Hon. John E. Denison, Speaker of the House of Commons, a very high authority in all matters connected with either public or private Parliamentary business, in his evidence before a committee of that House upon the Business of the House, in 1861, says, in reference to this question,—“ If you look at the precedent of private “ legislation, you will see that some few years ago “ it was held that it would be quite impossible to “ concede such enormous interests as railway in“ terests to a committee of five men; but these “ enormous interests, such as the consolidation of “ all the railways in the centre of Scotland, which “ was discussed before the House of Commons the “ other day, and the great question of the docks at “Liverpool and the Mersey, now go to five men “appointed by the Committee of Selection, and “practically there is no appeal from their decision, “because the House has been obliged almost to “adopt as a rule that it will not interfere with the “decision of committees.”* In a subsequent part of his evidence, after re-iterating this statement, he adds, that the House is more disposed to support the decision of the committee, because the smallness of the number of the members increases the responsibility of the committee.†

In pursuance of this principle, the practice has prevailed of late years, in the Lower House, in the consideration of private bills in committee of the whole, of not treating the amendments made by the select committee as amendments, but considering the bill, as amended, as a whole; thus in reporting the bill to the House, the chairman refers only to the amendments made in committee of the whole. Bills from the Senate form a necessary exception to this practice, as every amendment made to the bill as sent down from that House must be communicated for its concurrence.

mittee, empowering them to make provision for any matters not relevant to the subject matter of the bill. An instruction is not ordinarily compulsory, but rather permissive; a mandatory or compulsory instruction may, however, be given, and instances are to be found in which committees on bills have been instructed "that they do make provision," &c., or "do make two bills into one."* An instruction should always be made a distinct question, after the order of the day has been read, and not as an amendment to the question for the Speaker leaving the chair, unless its object be to prevent the sitting of the committee; as the amendment, if agreed to, supersedes the question for the Speaker leaving the Chair.† No amendment which is irrelevant to the bill (as extending its operations beyond the limits expressed in the preamble and title, &c.) can be made without an instruction.‡ If any amendment be made that is not within the title of the bill, the committee amend the title accordingly, and report the same specially to the House.§

Council of the County of Two Mountains to subscribe for stock in any railway passing through that county, was instructed to inquire into the expediency of the extending its provisions to the County of Terrebonne. The bill was amended accordingly and passed, and was subsequently amended by the Legislative Council so as to extend its operation also to the counties of Rouville and Missisquoi.

When it may be found necessary to insert, in a private bill, a clause affecting the public revenue, property, or credit, the authority therefor must (with the consent of the Government) emanate from a committee of the whole: thus, in 1866, the Canada Vine Growers' Association having applied for an Act of incorporation, a bill was introduced and proceeded with in the ordinary way; and the consent of the Government having been obtained, a Resolution (originating in committee of the whole) was passed by the House, exempting the wines made by the Association from excise duties for a term of ten years; and the Resolution was referred to the committee of the whole on the bill, to make the necessary provision therein. In 1867-8, this exemption was extended for a further period of two years,—the same course being taken as before.

In the committee of the whole, the same course is adopted as in the select committee,—the question being proposed on the preamble first.† The chairman then reads the number of each clause in succession, with the marginal note which explains its objects. If no amendment be offered to a clause, he at once puts the question, “That this clause stand part of the bill,” and proceeds to the next. When an amendment is proposed, he states the line in which the alteration is to be made, and puts the question in the ordinary form. No amendment can be made to a clause after the committee has passed on to another clause; nor can any amendment be offered to any clause which is irrelevant to the subject matter of such clause, but the same should be submitted, as a separate clause, at the end of the bill.‡ Clauses may be postponed, unless they have been amended, when it is not regular to postpone them. clauses are considered after the other clauses are disposed of, and before any new clauses are brought up. If the committee cannot go through the whole bill at one sitting, they direct the chairman to report progress, and ask leave to sit again. When the bill has been fully considered, the chairman puts a question, "That I do report this bill without amendment," or "with the amendments, to the House;" which being agreed to, the sitting of the committee is concluded, and Mr Speaker resumes the chair: upon which the chairman approaches the steps of the Speaker's chair, and reports from the committee that "they had gone through the bill and had made amendments thereto," or that "they had gone through the bill and directed him to report the same without amendment." * Sometimes, however, the proceedings of a committee are brought to a close by an order "That the chairman do now leave the chair;" in which case the chairman, being without instructions, makes no report to the House, and the bill disappears from the Order Book and is generally regarded as defunct; but it is nevertheless competent for the House to appoint another day for the committee, and to proceed with the bill.†

Proceedings after report.

When the chairman has reported the bill to the House, the entire bill is open to consideration, and amendments may be made, and new clauses added (of which due notice has been given, as above mentioned), or the bill may be re-committed for further amendment.* If amendments have been made in committee, the question is at once put upon each amendment, in the order in which it stands in the bill; or the consideration of the bill, as reported, may be postponed to a future day. If any of the amendments are supposed to be in excess of the Notice given by the promoters of the bill, the proper course is to refer them to the Committee on Standing Orders for their report.†

Third reading ordered.

When the bill has been reported, and the amendments made in committee (if any) have been disposed of by the House, it is ordered for a third reading on the following day. The practice of engrossing on parchment, all bills ordered for a third reading, was discontinued in 1851, when both Houses agreed to substitute bills printed by the Queen's Printer, for the engrossed copies: a further change was made in 1862, when the printing of these bills was transferred to the Parliamentary contractors, with whom it still remains.

13.—THIRD READING OF BILL.

Private bills on the Orders of the Day for a ^{Time for} third reading, take precedence, on Private Bill ^{third read-} days (see remarks under “Second reading of Bill” ^{ing.} supra, p. 100) of all other Orders.* At this stage it is not customary to make any amendments but such as are merely verbal; no important amendment may be proposed without one day’s notice thereof:† if it be considered necessary, the order for the third reading may be discharged, and the bill re-committed.

This is usually the stage at which the Queen’s ^{Rights of} consent is signified to any bill affecting the pro- ^{the Crown.} perty or interests of the Crown.‡

The order for the third reading being read, the ^{Passage} member in charge of the bill moves 1st, “That ^{of bill.} the bill be now read a third time; 2nd, “That the bill do now pass, and that the title be,” &c. The Clerk is then ordered to carry the bill to the Senate, and desire their concurrence.

Every stage of a private bill, in its passage through the House of Commons, has now been described. It may be here mentioned, that, in accordance with the practice on public bills, a bill may, upon urgent and extraordinary occasions, be advanced two or more stages in one day,* but except in cases of urgent and pressing necessity, no motion may be made to dispense with any Standing Order relative to private bills without due notice,† printed in the Votes.

No Standing Order suspended without notice.

Bills amended by Senate.

If a bill be subsequently returned from the Senate with amendments, the member in charge (or any other member acting for him) moves "That the amendments made by the Senate to the Bill (title) be now taken into consideration." They are then read by the Clerk a first time, and if merely verbal or unimportant, they are read a second time, and may be at once agreed to; the Clerk is then ordered to carry the bill to the Senate. If any of the amendments be important, they are referred to the Standing Committee to which the bill was originally referred,‡ and all further proceedings on the matter are suspended until their report is received.

The practice in the Senate with reference to any of their bills which may have been returned from the Commons with amendments, differs somewhat from that of the Commons in this respect,—leaving it optional to refer the amendments to the select committee, or to a committee of the whole.*

If the House disagree to one or more of the amendments, a committee is appointed to draw up the reasons for disagreeing, and they are communicated to the Senate at a conference,† and an opportunity is thus afforded to the Senate of not insisting upon the amendments objected to; or the reasons may be set forth in the motion for disagreeing, and communicated by message.‡ In the event of both Houses refusing to yield the point in discussion, the bill is withdrawn or abandoned.§

14.—PROCEEDINGS ON PRIVATE BILLS IN THE SENATE.

The proceedings on private bills in the Upper House differed materially from those in the Lower House, until the year 1861; but in that year the Legislative Council adopted Private Bill Rules identical with those of the Legislative Assembly. Some changes were made in these Rules by the House of Commons, in the first Session after Confederation,—the most important of which consisted in the reference of bills after the first instead of the second reading (hereinbefore referred to): this change, and certain minor alterations contingent upon it, were not adopted by the Senate, and bills before that House are therefore referred, as heretofore, after the second reading. In other respects the proceedings of the two Houses may be said to be identical.* When any such bill has been

There are also (under other of their Standing Orders) special matters required to be proved, or to be done, in certain classes of bills ; and it is especially provided that no bill for the regulation of any trade, or the extension of the term of a patent, is to be read a second time, until a select committee has reported upon the expediency of taking it into further consideration. 15.—ROYAL ASSENT.

Private bills receive the Royal Assent in the same manner and form, and at the same time, as public bills. Heretofore, every private Act, almost without exception, contained a clause declaring that it “shall be deemed a public Act.” The effect of this clause was that it should be construed as an enactment that such Act should be judicially noticed by all Judges, Justices of the Peace and others, without being specially pleaded; whereas private Acts which did not contain such a clause could be judicially noticed only when specially pleaded. But by the “Interpretation Act” passed in 1867, it is expressly provided that “every Act shall, unless by express provision it is declared to be a Private Act, be deemed to be a Public Act, and shall be judicially noticed by all Judges, Justices of the Peace, and others, without being specially pleaded; and all copies of Acts printed by the Queen’s Printer, shall be evidence of such Acts and of their contents.” *

Printing of private acts with the Statutes.

Until the year 1849, private Acts were printed with the public statutes, and bound together in the same volume. In that year, an Act was passed* which provided that local Acts should be printed (at the expense of the Province) in such number only as should suffice for distribution to the Judges, Public Departments, and certain local functionaries; and that of private or personal Acts, 150 copies only should be printed, at the expense of the parties obtaining the same. Under this arrangement no private Acts of any class were printed for general distribution with the Statutes; and the inconvenience attending it was so strongly felt, that in 1851 an Act was passed† providing for the printing and distribution of all local, private, and personal Acts, in the same manner, and to the same extent as the public Acts,—reviving, in fact, the former practice of binding up all the Acts of a Session, public and private, in the same volume. But by the “Interpretation Act” of 1867, it is provided that the Governor in Council may direct the distribution of the Statutes in such manner, either by the binding of the Public General Acts, and Acts of a local or private character, in separate volumes, or by binding them together in the same volumes with separate indexes or otherwise, as may be deemed expedient.* It may be worthy of consideration whether the public convenience would not be sufficiently consulted by printing a limited number (say 500 copies) of the local and private Acts, binding them in a supplementary volume, and distributing them with the public Acts only where they are really required.† This would cause a large saving in the cost of printing, and would disencumber the Statute Book of a mass of enactments which have no bearing on the statute law of the land.

* 31 Vic., cap. 1, sec. 13.

† All such private Acts of the Imperial Parliament as contain the "public" clause are printed in a separate collection, and are known as local or personal Acts. Another class, consisting chiefly of inclosure, drainage, and estate Acts, are printed by the Queen's Printers, and contain a clause declaring that a copy so printed "shall be admitted as evidence thereof by all judges, justices and others," and a further enactment that the "Act shall not be deemed a public Act." A third class, consisting of name, naturalization, divorce, and other strictly personal Acts, are not printed; but a list of them is inserted by the Queen's Printers after the titles of the other private Acts.
